

Public education continually faces a central challenge: Each child is unique and special, and each deserves an educational environment that nurtures his or her development and encourages a lifelong love of learning; but how, faced with diverse demographics and disparate resources, can communities create public schools that serve all children equitably and genuinely?

At McMillan Smith & Partners, we understand that an effective school facility not only benefits individual students but also reflects the goals and values of the communities it serves.

That's why we believe it's so important to design schools that are safe, accessible, flexible, and highly functional, inside and out. To us, that's the textbook definition of value.

K-12 Educational Facilities

McMillan Smith & Partners begins by exploring the unique culture of the school's constituents: students, teachers, administrators and the community at large. We listen and learn, so that each K-12 facility we design is specific to its district's needs.

Our extensive experience working with school districts, along with both state and local agencies, gives us a thorough understanding of public school codes and regulations, which significantly streamlines design and construction. Our comprehensive knowledge of educational design, cost and schedule controls, construction methods, and sustainable design principles allows us to meet stringent schedules and budgets. And our K-12 design team is dedicated to careful stewardship of public funds, from cost-effective siting and design detailing to hands-on construction oversight and documentation.

We're dedicated to creating schools that work for students, educators, residents and taxpayers – now and in the decades to come.
